This resource is packaged with a binder and looseleaf pages consisting of 136 map sheets developed from 1:10,000 to 1:20,000 publication scales. This resource maps the Atchafalaya River System from the Old River Lock to the Atchafalaya Bay, including its tributaries.

The Atchafalaya River is located in central Louisiana. The 170 mile river is fed by the Mississippi and Red Rivers, which are connected via the Old River Lock. Navigation is therefore reduced by almost 172 miles for vessels sailing between the Mississippi above the Old River Lock and the Intracoastal Waterway in southern Louisiana saving time, money, energy and reducing river traffic congestion near the Port of New Orleans.

The Atchafalaya River is a natural outlet for the Atchafalaya River Basin and is the only area building new ground near the Gulf of Mexico. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) is responsible for providing data pertaining to navigation on and along the river. As part of a comprehensive mapping project, the USACE develops updated flood control and navigation maps as well as hydrographic survey maps for the Atchafalaya River.
