I get lots of questions regarding my job. How do you cope? How did you get into this kind of work? What is the scariest thing that ever happened to you? How many wrecks have you had? How do you stand the kids? Don't you need nerve medicine to get through? Doesn't it get boring driving so many hours in the same area? How do you stay sane out there? I teach driver's education. This book was written to answer these questions. It is one big story chock-full of many small stories. Some are amusing. Some are sad. Some are scary. All are real (excluding stories made up by students to amuse people). I divided the book into three parts. Part One is basically how I got here. Part Two goes into problems on the road. Part Three tells about a number of interesting characters I've had in the car with me.
