The drawings are from various periods of my life and represent a number of themes. Some of them have been transformed into medium and large-sized paintings and panels which translate my ideas, feelings and objectives through a variety of colors and available material. Seeing these drawings now, transferred to the black and white pages of a book, I feel like coloring them all over again. I want to experiment with different tones, and I want to relive the pleasure of creation. And so will you. You can fill in the spaces with your colored pencils. This is the process of the artist: the creators throughout the ages who lose themselves in the process. You will be that artist. The images and colors are your medium, with music in the background or, perhaps...silence. Coloring can help us with our problems in our busy lives. So enjoy yourself in this calm and relaxing process.
